

WATER PUMP INFORMATION

GWT-98A & GWT-133A

Let's pay attention for these part nos. this month!!

GWT-98A & GWT-133A

Manufacturer: TOYOTA

Engine: 1ZZ(1800cc)

As you see from the below pictures, the shapes are almost same. (Picture ①)

However... you will identify the difference of the aluminium bodies. (Picture ②)

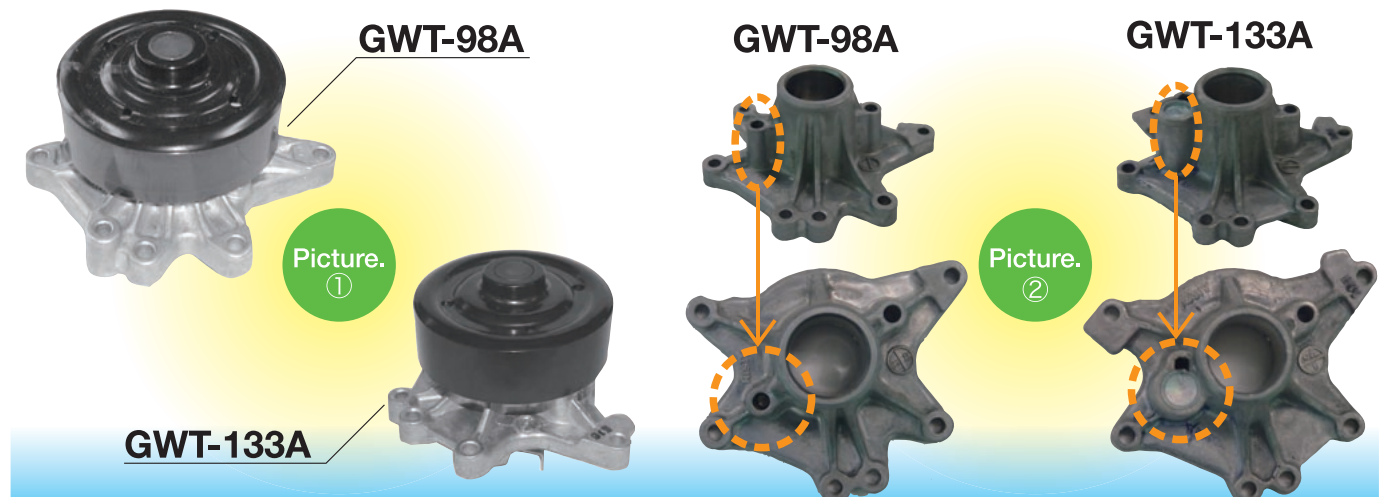

The reason why there is the difference...

① A countermeasure for Initial Seepage

... There is a small leak phenomenon from the weep hole out of pumps returned as a claim, however, this is a situation brought about by the inside pressure when the seal is lubricated and cooled. So this is not a claim.

There are variable time gaps and volumes between each product after the coolant lubricates the seal when the initial seepage stops. By creating the weep hole as a pipe form, the coolant, which condenses from steam, remains there and should not show any leak trace since the coolant seepage evaporates there. However, the pipe size of GWT-98A could not totally prevent the seepage leak trace from showing. GWT-133A is an improved model from GWT-98A, where the pipe was widened and the surface area made into an evaporation chamber to allow the coolant to evaporate more completely. Accordingly the initial seepage does not appear on the pump surface.
